

Coordinated School Health: The Missing Link in Unbridled Learning

Coordinated School Health Symposium

June 24-25, 2012 • Marriott Griffin Gate, Lexington

Want to get the most bang for your buck? Bring a district team and maximize your experience! District representatives could include, but are not limited to, principals, food service directors, the superintendent, board members, school nurse, PE. teachers, FRYSC staff, local health departments and community partners. Individual participants also are welcome.

Research has clearly shown the connection between a student's health and wellness and his or her school success. By attending this year's Coordinated School Health Symposium, you will:

- Explore the linkages between coordinated school health programs and a wide variety of positive student outcomes, including increased academic achievement, attendance and graduation rates and decreased achievement gaps;
- more clearly understand your role and how you connect to the program review;
- and learn how to bridge the gap between what schools know and what they do.

Don't miss this exciting opportunity for key stakeholders to learn and plan together.

Keynote speaker

Coordinating the Chaos: Promoting Student Health, Sound Nutrition, and Quality Learning in an Era of Insane Demands on Education

Dr. John Skretta will describe practical steps and helpful strategies for educators who are striving to embrace a healthy school culture and promote a coordinated school health approach in their schools and districts. His emphasis will be on key lessons derived from practical experience in a growing district. Dr. Skretta is a 2010 Alliance For A Healthier Generation Healthy Schools Champion and superintendent of the Norris School District outside of Firth, Neb.

Co-sponsored by

This year's event will feature 15 sessions covering all eight components of the Coordinated School Health model.

Planned topics include:

- Coordinated School Health – what's worked and what hasn't
- Join the League – make a difference – implement Fuel Up to Play 60
- Bullying and suicide: what you need to know
- School employee health
- Healthy Schools program
- Increasing family/community involvement through facility use agreements
- School leaders in comprehensive school-based physical activity programs
- The impact on school policy and environmental change through Students Taking Charge
- Boosting school breakfast participation: Academics, health and the bottom line
- Healthy Hungry-Free Kid Act federal updates
- Health services: Tracking data related to financial impact and student achievement
- Family and community connections through the Family Resource and Youth Services Centers
- Policy-Practices-Programs: How to connect what you do with what you say

All workshop details and descriptions will be available in mid-May at www.ksba.org.

Healthy Schools Celebration

Join us to honor the exceptional work being done in coordinated school health. More than 40 schools will be recognized for their achievements.

Dr. Steve Davis, acting commissioner of the Kentucky Department for Public Health, will speak about the connections between health and academics, while Felicia Smith, associate commissioner at the Department of Education, will discuss Kentucky Coordinated School Health and its potential impact on the goals of Unbridled Learning.

School districts that have implemented a model 100 percent Tobacco-Free School Policy will be recognized by Kentucky Board of Education Health Subcommittee members who have been invited to the ceremony. The Alliance for a Healthier Generation will recognize schools that have worked to improve their physical activity and nutritional environments through its Healthy Schools Framework. The Southeast Dairy Association also will be part of the celebration, with Fuel Up to Play 60 "STARS."
