On-Demand Threat Preparedness Training for School Board Members

Kentucky's school board members and their districts now have access to additional self-study training on the topic of school safety. SafetyInSchools offers two new online training modules for use in preparing for crises in our schools, both eligible for board training and EILA credit.

- Creating a Culture of Readiness: A Firsthand Account of a School Tragedy (2 hours) - $100
This informative and heartbreaking training provides a first-hand account from the perspective of then-superintendent Trent Lovett of the active shooter event at Marshall County High School on Jan. 23, 2018. The tragedy resulted in two student deaths and 18 non-fatal injuries. Lovett recounts that day and offers lessons learned for school administrators and employees.

- Awareness and Response to Active Shooter Threats (2 hours) - $100
This active shooter video training offers details from active shooting events across the country including body camera footage and police scanner sound bites. The training is administered by a retired law enforcement officer with more than two decades of experience in thousands of high-risk tactical operations. This high-intensity training will leave participants with a lingering awareness of threats that face schools each day. Through the "D.E.F.E.N.D." concept, school leaders will gain insight into achieving real physical security.

To register, check the box of the training(s) above for which you wish to register and complete the form below. Scan and email the completed form to training@ksba.org. Your email address will be used to provide access to the online training modules. Upon completion of this online training, KSBA will be alerted and board training credit will be awarded automatically. Board members who complete both course will receive 4 hours of Level IV/V elective credit in the KSBA Academy of Studies.
